WENT YORK HURALD THESINAY MARCH IS LETS-TRIPLE SHEET

ANOTHER GREAT STRIKE IMPENDING

The Bess Carpenters Resolve to Return to the Ten-Hour System.

Excitement Among the Workmen and a Determination to Strike if Necessary.

The excitement that at the present time prevails among the various trades of the city seems to indicate that another gigantic strike is impending, such as that of last year, which for several months paralyzed the industry of this and neighboring cities. The strike of last year, as may be remembered, was inaugurated by the carpenters for the purpose of securing eight hours as the maximum of a day's work. The movement rapidly extended, and in a few weeks the entire trades representing the building interests of the city had suspended work, along with many other branches of industry.

The struggle was a hard one. The employers held out until the last moment, and refused to accede to the demands made by the men; but business was pressing, orders were pouring in, and after some weeks spent in idleness the carpenters, joiners and bricklayers returned to work at their own terms, the masters at the same time stating that they yielded under protest and did not consider the compact binding.

The other trades were not so fortunate in their fight for the reduction of the hours of labor. A vast amount of money was expended, leagues were formed embracing all the wood workers, but it did not avail, the employers were too strong for the men, and the latter were forced by the pressure of circumstances and the necessities of their families to resume work under the old regime. While the strike lasted the misery suf-fered by the families of the poorer strikers was intense. Many of the trades started in the crusade with well-filled treaswries, but before the struggle was ended the treasuries were empty, the trades were disheartened and the termination of the contest was looked upon as a blessing by these who at the outset were most eager and enthusiastic in lavor of Even among the trades which were successful the new system did not work well. There were mady non-union workmen who were forced into the movement against their wish and their sup-port of it at the best was but half-hearted. How-the movement against their wish and their support of it at the best was but half-hearted. However just the demands of their fellow craftsmen might be in the abstract they were not disposed to ABANDON THEIR BUSINESS when it was briskest and engage in a fight in which they were certain to lose time and money, with but a faint prospect of victory. However, they had no alternative but to do as the majority did. The trades unions, while abstaining from the excesses which have disgraced sister societies in England, had no intention of allowing their plans to be spoiled by those who were not union men, and, by threats in some cases and moral sunsion in others, they succeeded in inducing the wavering and irresolute to make common cause with them. When the strike had successfully terminated, the discipline which had been so strictly maintained while it lasted was in some measure dropped, and the black sheep of the organizations, when surveillance of them was lost, did all manner of things which they ought not to have done, worked the ten hours a day, and in some cases even longer than this. So lax did they become that the carpenters, when all was over, were forced to form vigilance committees to watch the delinquents, but without much success, and the abuses still continued. During the past four months times, as usual at this season of the year, have been very duil, and trade has, in a great measure, been at a stand still. With the opening of the Spring prospects are brightening, and the indications are that the coming Spring, Summer and Fall will be unusually brisk.

It was well known to the men at the termination of the strike that the promises of the masters were not made in good faith, and they have been watched with great suspicion, as it was believed that they would seize the first opportunity to go back upon their agreement. This supposition was correct. For some days past a movement has been in progress among the masters to compel the men to return to the old hours of labor, and on last Thursday evening at the q men in our employ to return to the ten hours system.

Several of the most prominent builders of the city, foreseeing the consequences which the passage of this resolution would entail, and THE INEVITABLE CONFLICT that must ensue, strongly opposed it; but on a vote being taken 17 voted for the motion and 10 against, and it was declared carried. Another resolution was then adopted for the appointment of a committee to confer with the United Order of Carpenters and Joiners and effect a settlement of the matter.
What transpired at this meeting was not made what transpired at this meeting was not made known until Saturday, and of course it created intense excitement among the workingmen. The strength of the Employers' Association was known to be formidable, and the workingmen knew that it would require a hard fight to prevent the enforcement of the old time. The strike of last year took away most of the sinews of war from the treasury, but the wealth of the monopolists was maimpaired, they having rapidly recovered from the temporary embarrassment which the suspension of work for three months entailed. On Sanday groups of workingmen gathered in various parts of the city, particularly the haunts which became famous hast year. The chances of another fight were eagerly discussed, and, while it was looked forward to with no particular anxiety, the determination was expressed by one and all that no compromise would be made with the employers and no return to the ten hour system would for a moment be thought of.

At the meeting of

THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY held on Sunday the subject came up for discussion. It was resolved that, as the strike last year was carried out for principle, it would be impossible for the men now working at the eight-hour system were now pretty well known. It was intended to benefit the many, and not the few, the adoption of the system had already secured the employment of a much larger number of men than formerly. The return to the ten-hour system would destroy all this, and thousands of tradesmen who would be otherwise employed would be reduced to a state of starvation. It was resolved by the society that the workmen should be sustained in whatever action they should take against the bosses. The latter would be compelled to regret their hasty action before long, as the workmen of the city were not prepared for the struggle. At the next meeting of the Federal Council the matter to be folly discussed. known until Saturday, and of course it created inis to be fully discussed. The trades which are most deeply affected by the The trades which are most deeply affected by the sudden action of the emplayers are the carpenters and the Joiners. The carpenters are divided into two classes—the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners and the United Order of American Mechanics. The former, though not equal in number to the latter, have a much more periect organization, fashioned on the English model. The society is widespread in its ramifications, and has branches in every large city of the Union, and in England also. Weekly fees are collected from the members with great regularity, and, as these teachers the treasury is generally full. Agents members with great regularity, and, as these tees are large, the treasury is generally full. Agants are employed whose sole duty it is to provide work for those members who may happen to be out of employment, and for whoever the Union may send them when a strike is on. The organization has 500 members in this city. As soon as the action of the boss carpenters was announced on saturday every member of the society was warned to Drop work.

As soon as any reduction of wages or increase of the hours of labor was attempted. Further instructions were issued, inviting all carpenters who were not members to take like actios, and promising such strikers pay at ence and work as soon as it could be procured.

could be procured.

A meeting of the committee of the Union was in session all day yesterday at Munzinger Hail, West Thirty-second street, who were to receive reports of any action on the part of the bosses and to be in readiness to organize a strike if necessary. Up to a late hour in the afternoon no such reports were received. To-day will probably decide whether we are to be inflicted with a total paralyzation of all branches of industry, as most of the trades are only waiting for the carpenters to take the lead.

THE CARPENTERS.

The Impending Strike. The Journeymen Carpenters' Association met

inst evening in Demilt Hall, corner of Second avemue and East Twenty-third street, to take action in relation to the stand of the bosses in resolving in relation to the stand of the bosses in resolving that on and after yesterday they would "hire and pay all workmen by the hour."

Mr. John R. Voordins, on behalf of the Master Carpenters' Association, presented the bosses' ultimatum, and asked the appointment of a committee by the men to conier with a similar committee of the bosses in relation thereto.

The men resolved that they would not accede to the demands of the bosses in relation to working by the hour, and that they would stand by the eight-hour system, making it imperative upon all iourneymen carpenters in the Carpenters' Association to work no more than eight hours a day, but as much less as they pleased. They, nevertheless, appointed a committee, consisting of John Nolan, Michael Pardee and Michael Moss, to confer with the committee from the bosses and general with the committee from the bosses and jengt at

THE SCANNELL JURY.

Letter from One of the Jurors. NEW, YORK, March 9, 1873.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—
So many mistakes having been made in representing the proceedings of the jury in the Scannell case I deem it but justice to correct some of them. In the first place, the first ballot did not stand 8 to 4. It stood 6 and 6. I will give you the balloting as it occurred, and I believe I was the only juror who kept a strict account of it. In the next place, I will say that the deliberations of the jury were anything but barmonious, as stated. The discussions were very pointed, amounting at times (and I am sorry to say it) to a disposition on the part of some of the jurors to force others to do that which their hone t convictions and understanding of the evidence told them they could not do. I attribute this to their anxiety to arrive at a verdict in consequence of the long deliberations and necessary heavy expense of such a trial. It seemed to be a desire on the part of all the jurors to arrive at a verdict if possible, believing that His Hower Judge Brady expected it of them; but it was among the things impossible with a jury composed of men who did their own thinking. I now give you the balloting where changes were made, some intermediate balloting having been done without change, which I did not think worth my while to keep account of:—6 to 6, 7 to 5, 7 to 4 and 1 blank, 8 to 4, 7 to 5—last, 8 to 4, the majority always for guity. Another ballot, had we been sent back, would have resulted, I am well convinced, 7 to 5; one juryman who had changed would have come back to his first position. These figures are correct, and the report that the jury stood 8 to 4 on the first ballot is so palpably wrong that I feel it my duty to correct it. I think all the gentlemen on the jury, when they come to reflect upon it, will bear me out in the above statement.

ONE OF The Minority. I was the only juror who kept a strict account of

DEATH OF A PRISONER IN THE TOMBS.

George C. Braun, the German, thirty-four years of age, late of 134 Orchard street, who on Friday last was committed to the Tombs by Mayor Havemeyer to answer a charge of perjury, died yesterday in his cell, as is thought, from heart disease. Braun, in order to go bail for Walter J. Jewell, a sporting man, of 702 Broadway, who was under arrest, made oath that he was worth $30,000 in uncumbered real estate, instead of which, however, it is alleged, he was worth next to nothing. Coroner Herrman has the case in charge and will hold an inquest in the case to-day.
